Joel T. Ubat, Ph.D.

Negros Oriental State University –
Guihulngan City Campus
Chairperson, Mathematics Department

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Holistic Student Development Initiative of Negros Oriental State University is a comprehensive and innovative program designed to strengthen student learning, leadership, and community involvement through a unified and multidimensional approach. Anchored in the pillars of research, leadership formation, cultural development, academic competitions, and community service, the initiative seeks to nurture well-rounded learners equipped with the essential competencies needed for academic excellence, civic responsibility, and future professional success.

The program integrates student-centered activities across the university, ensuring that learning extends beyond classroom instruction. Through research training, mentoring, and campus-wide research congresses, students develop critical thinking, inquiry skills, and scholarly confidence. Leadership capacity is strengthened through student congresses, capability-building workshops, and organizational development sessions led by the Office of Student Affairs and Services and the League of Student Organizations.

Cultural appreciation and creativity are promoted through events such as LitMus, performing arts activities, and annual campus celebrations including Founders' Day, where students showcase literary, musical, and artistic talents. Academic excellence is further enhanced through local, regional, and national competitions, allowing students to apply knowledge, build collaboration, and achieve recognition. The initiative also prioritizes extension and community service, enabling students to implement literacy programs, environmental campaigns, livelihood training, and other service-oriented activities in partnership with local government units and community organizations.

With its inclusive, collaborative, and development-focused design, the program fosters a supportive academic environment that cultivates confidence, competence, and character. By aligning research, leadership, culture, competitions, and community service into a single coherent framework, the Holistic Student Development Initiative provides meaningful opportunities that prepare students to become productive citizens, effective leaders, and contributors to regional and national development.

PROGRAM CONTENT AND PROCESSES

The Holistic Student Development Initiative at NORSU – Guihulngan Campus provides comprehensive support and engagement opportunities for students through five interrelated components: research, leadership, culture, competitions, and community service. The program integrates these areas to ensure holistic student growth academically, socially, and personally, while aligning with the university's mission to develop competent, socially responsible, and globally competitive graduates.

Research activities include the campus-wide Research Congress, research writing workshops, and mentoring programs that develop students' analytical and scholarly competence. Leadership development is promoted through leadership bootcamps, student congresses, and peer mentoring initiatives, equipping students with decision-making, teamwork, and ethical leadership skills. Cultural engagement is fostered through LitMus arts and literary events and participation in Founders' Day 2025 cultural and academic activities, cultivating appreciation of local and national heritage and reinforcing community identity. Competitions such as local and national academic competitions and international webinars and conferences provide students opportunities to apply knowledge, innovate, and demonstrate skills in diverse contexts, enhancing confidence and performance under constructive pressure. Community service is implemented through extension programs in literacy, livelihood, and environment, in partnership with local government units and civic organizations, allowing students to contribute meaningfully to social welfare and sustainable development.

PROGRAM CONTENT AND PROCESSES

The implementation process follows a structured cycle. Students first undergo orientation and skill-building workshops to prepare for active participation. They then engage in the activities, guided by faculty advisers, student leaders, and administrative support. Continuous monitoring, reflection, and documentation ensure effective participation and learning, while feedback supports improvement. While key events are scheduled throughout the academic year, smaller workshops, mentoring sessions, and outreach projects occur year-round to maintain consistent engagement. This integrated process ensures students are supported in intellectual, personal, and social development.

IMPLEMENTATION

The Holistic Student Development Initiative at NORSU – Guihulngan Campus is implemented annually and continuously throughout the academic year, with activities scheduled across semesters to ensure consistent student engagement and support. While major events such as the Research Congress, LitMus Festival, Founders' Day activities, and community outreach programs occur at designated times, smaller workshops, training sessions, mentorship activities, and competitions are conducted year-round to maintain active participation and promote holistic student development. This sustained implementation ensures that students receive ongoing guidance and opportunities in research, leadership, culture, competitions, and community service, with key responsibilities carried out by the NORSU Administration, Vice President for Student Affairs Services, Office of the Student Affairs Services, Research Office, Extension Office, League of Student Organizations, and the Student Government.

A total of 200 pre-service teachers received their name-plated emblems and are scheduled for deployment in the second semester across partner schools in the Division of Guihulngan City.

PROBLEMS IN IMPLEMENTATION

Despite significant progress, several challenges have affected the implementation of the Holistic Student Development Initiative. Scheduling conflicts among academic, extracurricular, and personal commitments sometimes reduce student participation in key events, while variability in student engagement and motivation may affect consistent involvement across different program components. Human resource limitations are also notable. Faculty advisers and staff, while dedicated, face time constraints due to academic and administrative responsibilities, which may limit the depth of mentorship and supervision. Some campuses experience logistical challenges in coordinating multi-campus activities, ensuring the availability of venues, materials, and technological resources for workshops, competitions, and webinars.

Additionally, external factors such as weather conditions, transportation issues, or limited support from local government units or partner organizations occasionally disrupt planned activities, especially for community service and outreach programs. Technological gaps, including inadequate access to reliable internet, online platforms, or digital tools, may hinder participation in virtual conferences, webinars, or remote mentorship sessions.

Despite these challenges, the initiative continues to adapt through careful planning, stakeholder collaboration, and ongoing feedback mechanisms to ensure successful implementation and meaningful student development.

APPROACHES TO SOLVE PROBLEMS

1. Scheduling Conflicts and Student Engagement

A comprehensive annual activity calendar was established to minimize conflicts with academic deadlines. Digital reminders and announcements were sent to students, and incentives such as recognition awards and certificates were provided to encourage consistent participation and motivation across all program components.

2. Human Resource Limitations

Additional trained mentors and peer leaders were assigned to assist faculty advisers in guiding and supervising students. Faculty workloads were balanced with teaching and administrative tasks to ensure sufficient time for mentoring, while student leaders coordinated events to maintain active student support despite personnel constraints.

3. Logistical Challenges

Standard operating procedures for event planning were implemented, covering venue booking, transportation, and equipment management. Close coordination between campus directors, the Vice President for Student Affairs and Services, and the Office of Student Affairs ensured smooth execution of workshops, competitions, and community programs across campuses.

improvement during the program implementation.

APPROACHES TO SOLVE PROBLEMS

4. External Factors (Weather, Transportation, Partner Support)

Contingency plans were applied for activities affected by weather or logistical issues. Alternative dates were scheduled, and some activities were conducted via virtual platforms when physical gatherings were not possible. Communication with local government units and partner organizations strengthened collaboration and support for community-based programs.

5. Technological Gaps

Access to reliable internet, digital tools, and online platforms was improved by providing IT support, necessary hardware, and training for both students and staff, ensuring smooth participation in webinars, virtual conferences, and remote mentoring sessions.

6. Monitoring and Evaluation

A centralized documentation and reporting system was implemented to track student participation and outcomes. Regular progress reports, feedback collection, and reflective sessions were conducted to assess effectiveness and identify areas for improvement during the program implementation.

IMPACTS ON STUDENTS

Students expressed high levels of satisfaction with the Holistic Student Development Initiative, noting that it significantly enhanced their academic, personal, and social growth. Participants appreciated the opportunity to engage in research projects, leadership trainings, cultural activities, competitions, and community service, which allowed them to apply classroom learning in real-world contexts. Many reported increased confidence, improved teamwork and leadership skills, and a stronger sense of civic responsibility and cultural appreciation. Students also valued the mentorship and guidance provided by faculty advisers and peer leaders, which supported their development and motivated them to participate actively in program activities. Overall, the initiative was seen as a well-rounded and meaningful experience that contributed positively to their personal development, skill enhancement, and readiness for future academic and professional challenges.

IMPACTS ON PROFESSORS

The Holistic Student Development Initiative positively impacted professors by providing opportunities to mentor, guide, and collaborate with students in research, leadership, cultural activities, competitions, and community service. Faculty members reported an enhanced sense of professional fulfillment from witnessing student growth and achievements. The program also encouraged interdisciplinary collaboration among faculty, fostering the sharing of best practices, innovative teaching strategies, and mentorship techniques. Professors gained insights into student needs, learning styles, and engagement patterns, which informed improvements in instructional approaches and advising. Additionally, their involvement in organizing and supervising program activities strengthened faculty-student relationships and reinforced their role in nurturing well-rounded, socially responsible, and competent graduates.

IMPACTS ON UNIVERSITY ADMINISTRATION

The Holistic Student Development Initiative positively impacted university administration by strengthening institutional oversight, coordination, and support for student engagement programs. Administrators observed improved collaboration between campus directors, faculty, and the Office of Student Affairs, leading to more efficient planning and implementation of student activities. The program enhanced the university's visibility and reputation by showcasing student achievements in research, leadership, culture, competitions, and community service at local, national, and international levels. It also provided valuable data and feedback for decision-making, resource allocation, and future program improvements. Overall, the initiative reinforced the administration's commitment to cultivating a holistic, student-centered learning environment, supporting the university's mission to produce competent, socially responsible, and globally competitive graduates.

RESPONSES FROM INDUSTRY/MARKET

The Holistic Student Development Initiative was positively received by industry partners and the broader market. Employers and collaborators noted that students who participated in research projects, leadership programs, competitions, and community service activities demonstrated enhanced critical thinking, problem-solving, teamwork, and communication skills. Industry partners expressed appreciation for the university's commitment to producing graduates who are not only academically competent but also socially responsible and professionally prepared. Some organizations engaged more actively with the university through internships, joint projects, and mentorship opportunities, citing the initiative as a platform that strengthens student readiness for real-world challenges and aligns with workforce expectations. Overall, the program contributed to enhanced industry confidence in the university's graduates and encouraged stronger collaboration between NORSU and relevant market stakeholders.

RESPONSES FROM CITIZEN/GOVERNMENT

The Holistic Student Development Initiative received positive responses from local communities and government units. Citizens and civic organizations acknowledged the contributions of students through extension programs in literacy, livelihood, and environmental initiatives, which addressed local needs and promoted community development. Local government units expressed support by collaborating on outreach projects, providing resources, and facilitating student participation in civic activities. The initiative was seen as strengthening town-gown relationships, enhancing community trust in the university, and promoting active citizenship among students. Government stakeholders recognized the program as a platform that cultivates socially responsible graduates who contribute meaningfully to public welfare and local development, reinforcing NORSU's commitment to societal engagement and nation-building.

LEAGUE OF STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS EVALUATION

No.	Statement	Weighted Mean	Description
1	The activity started on time	4.69	Very high level of agreement
2	The venue/site was conducive for the activity	4.66	Very high level of agreement
3	There was adequate preparation for the activity	4.72	Very high level of agreement
4	The activity encouraged participation	4.76	Very high level of agreement
5	The activity met its published objectives	4.70	Very high level of agreement
6	The activity led you to be more environmentally conscious	4.63	Very high level of agreement
7	The activity developed your sense of responsibility	4.74	Very high level of agreement
8	The activity organizer was commendable	4.80	Very high level of agreement
9	The activity fostered unity among students and faculty	4.69	Very high level of agreement
10	The activity ended on time	4.61	Very high level of agreement
Total Average		4.70	Very high level of agreement

The table above shows the overall evaluation for the League of Student Organizations (LSO) activity and the students' satisfaction. A Google survey link for the evaluation was disseminated to the students of NORSU – Guihulngan Campus. A total of 855 students responded, representing six colleges: CTED (255), CCJE (195), CIT (50), CAFF (52), CAS (90), and CBA (212).

The weighted mean scores of the ten indicators range from 4.61 to 4.80, all falling under the “Very high level of agreement” category. The overall weighted mean for all ten statements is 4.70, which is verbally interpreted as Strongly Agree. This indicates that the students generally strongly agreed with the positive aspects of the activity and perceived it as highly effective.

The time management indicators (statements 1 and 10) show that the activity started and ended on time, reflecting efficient scheduling and organization by the organizers. Similarly, the positive ratings for the venue suggest that the physical environment was conducive, comfortable, and supportive of student engagement. Statements related to preparation, participation, and achievement of objectives indicate that students recognized the organizers' competence in planning and implementing the activity. The high scores for personal and social impact (environmental awareness, responsibility, and fostering unity) reveal that the activity contributed to students' developmental growth and strengthened relationships among students and faculty.

LEAGUE OF STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS EVALUATION

Finally, the highest score for the commendability of the organizers highlights strong approval of their leadership, coordination, and overall effectiveness. Overall, the overall weighted mean of 4.70 confirms that the League of Student Organizations activity was well-organized, meaningful, and impactful, positively influencing student engagement, personal development, and the university community at NORSU – Guihulngan Campus.

WHERE DOES THE PROJECT GO FROM HERE?

Building on the successes and lessons learned from the implementation of the Holistic Student Development Initiative, the program at NORSU – Guihulngan Campus is envisioned to continue and expand as a cornerstone of student development. Future plans focus on sustaining and institutionalizing activities in research, leadership, culture, competitions, and community service, ensuring that they remain integrated into the academic calendar and accessible to all students across campuses.

The university aims to strengthen mentorship and faculty-student collaboration, expand partnerships with local government units, industries, and civic organizations, and explore opportunities for international linkages that provide students with broader exposure and competitive advantage. Technological enhancements, including digital platforms for workshops, webinars, and remote mentoring, will be further developed to support accessibility, participation, and documentation.

The program will also continue to implement monitoring, evaluation, and feedback mechanisms, ensuring that successes are replicated, challenges are addressed, and continuous improvements are applied. Revenue and resource management strategies will be refined to maintain program sustainability and expand offerings.

Ultimately, the Holistic Student Development Initiative is envisioned as a living, evolving framework that nurtures well-rounded, socially responsible, and competent graduates who embody the mission and vision of NORSU – Guihulngan Campus. By fostering a culture of excellence, engagement, and service, the program will continue to equip students with the skills, values, and experiences necessary to thrive in academic, professional, and community spheres, ensuring lasting impact on both students and the wider society.
